Despair in Detroit

BY WILLIAM F. KIRK.

There's despuir in Detroit, where Ty Cobh in his glory
Oace walloped the horsehide far over the fence—
For the Michigan rooters are learning the story
Of Greatness that withers when in the past tense.
The mill wheel won't spin with the water long vanished,
The sails will not fill with the wind of the Past.
Though 'tis but Midsummer all hope has been banished,
Where once a glad pennant was tied to the mast.

There's despair in the city of autos and flivers,
Where once strode Sam Crawford in pride to the plate.
Bleak winds comb the diamond and give the fans shivers
Where good old Hugh Jennings once loved to orate.
he furnace can't glow with the coal long departed, The blood cannot flow when the heart is not there; and few are the fans who still stand heavy-hearted Where once a proud banner waved high in the air.

So wither Life's giorles as fly the swift seasons,
And nothing on earth holds the throne very long.
No matter how sound its excuses or reasons,
Fint Failure can never stand in with the throng..
Young feilow now winning, forget that proud grinnl
And work for new laurels as never before.
For ever a greater Today is beginning
And mocking the ermine that Yesterday wore!
